

Salisbury Investment Castings Limited joins the Surelock McGill Group

For more than 50 years, the Salisbury site has been home to a skilled, family-run business dedicated to producing high-quality precision castings. Building on this legacy, we are excited to announce that Salisbury Investment Castings now joins the Surelock McGill Group, another family-run business, ensuring continuity for existing customers while opening the door to expanded capabilities and innovation.

Salisbury Investment Castings will continue under the experienced leadership of Mark Findlay-Wilson as Managing Director, with Richard Potter as General Manager. Together with the existing workforce, their expertise will ensure customers receive the same exceptional quality and service they have always relied upon.

We look forward to meeting with their existing customers, continuing their existing partnerships, and providing them with high-quality products for many years to come.

Looking ahead, we plan to:

- Expand casting facilities to increase capacity and flexibility
- Recruit additional staff to support our growing operations
- Introduce apprenticeships and graduate programmes to develop the next generation of skilled engineers and technicians

As part of the Surelock McGill Group, Salisbury Investment Castings will play a vital role in producing specialist components for our industry-leading range of high security products. With the Group's trusted working relationships with the Ministry of Defence, critical national infrastructure (CNI) facilities, and original equipment manufacturers (OEMs) worldwide, this partnership will further strengthen our UK sovereign manufacturing base.
